

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An interface is provided for interfacing at least one information stream with at least one modulator in the headend or hub of a broadband communications system. The interface allows for separating the media access control function from the modulator. By updating timing references, variable delays are handled appropriately.